Esthetic Retreat 2010: New Practice Concepts for the New Decade

Join us for an interactive program with two highly energetic speakers who will share with you their concepts for esthetic restorative treatments in the new decade. What are the treatment options that are best for different situations? How can treatment be staged due to patient economic limitations to not lose the advantages of more comprehensive care?

This course will provide a step-by-step approach from diagnosis and treatment planning, to tooth preparations and delivery protocols for simple treatments to the more complex interdisciplinary treatment approaches. Bring some of your cases to treatment planning sessions. See how the thought process of a prosthodontic treatment protocol can be used to your advantage in any cosmetic or general practice.

Upon completion of this course participants should learn:
- New technologies and procedures that can increase practice revenue.
- Patient education and management of the esthetically motivated patient.
- How to recognize and understand the macroscopic elements of esthetics and beauty.
- Guidelines for a complete esthetic analysis prior to the commencement of treatment.
- How to establish a sound and esthetic foundation through interdisciplinary care before the restorative phases of treatment.
- A deeper understanding of preparation protocols that maximize the esthetic treatment outcome.
- How to develop effective communication tools with the laboratory technologist for improved results.
- Case planning that will make complex cases appear more simple.
