Dr. Saunders is Professor of Clinical Dentistry and Group Practice Director, Division of Primary Oral Health Care, USC School of Dentistry. He spent twenty-four years actively practicing and teaching prosthodontics and maxillofacial prosthetics in the United Stated Air Force. He is a Diplomate of the American Board of Prosthodontics, a Fellow of the American College of Dentists, the International College of Dentists, and a Fellow and Past-President of the American Academy of Maxillofacial Prosthetics.

Lecture (Part I)
(April 21, 2007)
In this comprehensive workshop, Dr. Saunders will review treatment planning guidelines as well as principles of design for removable partial dentures. Participants will have the opportunity to review a patient case for removable partial denture and assist in the design process, applying the principles discussed by Dr. Saunders.

Upon completion of this course participants should be able to:
- Recognize the critical importance of patient examination
- Understand the importance of proper case selection
- Identify multiple clinical factors assisting in removable partial denture design
- Be familiar with a variety of removable partial denture design approaches
- Appreciate that there is more than one design concept suitable for any given situation
- Recognize that no removable partial denture is the best solution for every case

Removable Prosthodontics Study Club (Part II)
(June 2, August 4, October 6, and December 1, 2007)
Part II of this course is a 4-session study group allowing participants to bring in individual cases and discuss them with Dr. Saunders throughout the year. Course participants will have the option to bring patient diagnostic casts and pertinent patient information, such as radiographs, record of existing and/or proposed restorations or extractions, periodontal status as well as other patient information that may assist in the design of the removable partial denture.

Part I is required for enrollment in Part II of this program.

Testimonials:
“Great speaker, very energetic and no nonsense.”
“Excellent, inspiring, well worth it!”
