The 66th year of the Odontic Seminar features two symposia that review the legacies of two prosthodontists and how they have affected the current practices in prosthodontics. Bernard Levin and Alex Koper taught and mentored in the specialty and discipline of prosthodontics at USC for over fifty years. They endowed dentists with clinical excellence with their knowledge and passion for clinical prosthodontics. New paradigms for restorative dentistry include today's state-of-the-art technology and products that provide better quality restorations and more predictable outcomes. The 2010 USC New Odontic Seminar faculty dedicate this year's symposia to those two prosthodontists that have inspired the seminar faculty and students for the benefit of patients and the advancement of prosthodontics.

Bernard Levin’s Legacy in Removable prosthodontics established his dedication to the totally edentulous patient. The art of complete denture therapy is the foundation and challenge of esthetic dentistry. Dr. Levin’s principles and innovative solutions to achieve increased function and retention remain as testimonials to his achievements and principles. Dr. Levin realized that the progression of science, technology, and implant dentistry has progressed to the immediate delivery of a definitive fixed prosthesis. Regardless, the majority of patients cannot afford advanced prosthetic care and many can be successful with a set of dentures fabricated on sound principles.

Alex Koper was a master at long-term clinical success of traditional fixed and removable prosthodontics. Alex Koper’s symposia will feature Masahiro Kuwata who helped develop the first patent in metal-ceramics in the USA. This unique presentation will review the progress in ceramics with the treatment of one patient over thirty years to the present. Avishai Sadan and Sillas Duarte will present the advancing concepts in ceramic restorations. The faculty will emphasize the clinical implications of a prosthodontic practice.

The 66th year of the Odontic Seminar includes an invitation to participate in various symposia at USC that include international speakers that have implications for the prosthodontic patient. The objective of treatment planning is to bring together endodontists, periodontists, orthodontists, prosthodontists, and oral surgeons, and their auxiliary to actively interact with restorative dentists to develop PATIENT BASED treatment plans. I hope you will join us to continue your support of the USC New Odontic Seminar.
